

Jennifer Long

Jennifer is a regulatory consultant and former regulator who represents the interests of consumers on the BSG.

She is currently a Program Leader for the Toronto Centre in Canada, which supports international regulatory capacity building for financial stability and financial inclusion, and a Visiting Scholar at the International Monetary Fund for which she has also conducted regulatory assessments as part of the Financial Sector Assessment Program.

She previously held a wide range of regulatory roles in the European Commission, European Parliament, European Securities and Markets Authority, and UK Financial Conduct Authority, most recently as head of department responsible for financial crime policy. She has led the design and implementation of various new regulatory regimes at EU and national level and her experience spans analysis of markets and consumer behaviour, consumer and regulatory policy development, supervision and supervisory convergence.

Jennifer has an LLM in EU Commercial Law from the University of Leicester and an MA from the University of Cambridge.
