

Erik Isak Bengtzboe

Isak is the Chief Policy & Legal Adviser at Eurofinas, the European trade federation representing the specialised consumer credit providers in Europe. As a federation, Eurofinas brings together associations from across Europe that represent finance houses, specialised banks, captive finance companies of car, equipment, etc. manufacturers and universal banks.

In his role, he takes the overall lead on all matters relating to legal and regulatory developments affecting consumer credit providers in the European context, which provides for a specialised understanding of the varying frameworks and market conditions for both credit institutions as well as for non-banking entities.

He has over a decade of experience in the field of retail financial services and consumer credit with a broad horizontal focus on regulatory and legal matters of concern to the wider retail lending industry. This includes a broad variety of topics, including Anti-Money Laundering, AI, consumer protection, digital and retail banking, financial education and inclusion, insurance development & distribution, data privacy, payments as well as sustainable finance.

With a specialised knowledge on consumer credit-related activities across Europe, he strives to contribute to the important work of the European Banking Authority's Banking Stakeholder Group, supporting legal clarity, consistency, and a high and relevant level of consumer protection.

Isak is a Swedish national and studied law at Stockholm University, where he specialised in European constitutional and internal market law.
